Principal's Corner

Thank you to all the parents who were in attendance at our first quarter Parent Teacher Conferences held on last Friday. Parental involvement is consistently associated with higher levels of achievement, and the magnitude of the effect of parental involvement is substantial. It's the little things such as attending conferences, school assemblies, and other school events and activities that encourage students to have higher grades and standardized test scores, improved behavior at home and school, and better social skills and adaptation to school.

Parents can encourage their children to achieve by spending time talking about school work during dinner-time discussions. There have been occasions where parents scale back their involvement in their children's education when the school adds resources. Please don't let this be the case. As we enter the winter months and holiday season, please continue to encourage your children to continue their good work. Take the time to get involved. Teachers can work as a team with parents when they know their parents from school visits; make it a priority to attend school events and meetings that will help you understand and support your child's education.

Sincerely,

Sister Gloria Agumagu, HHCJ
